“Just Out Of Reach” A NOVEL BY BELINDA J. STEVENS

Just Out of Reach is the debut novel by Belinda J. Stevens. Stevens was born in Yazoo City Mississippi and is a prominent defense attorney who currently practices in Yazoo City Mississippi. Stevens grew up in the sixties where racial injustice and war were at the forefront of society.

Within the novel she conveys what it was like in those times by taking a controversial look into the life of a sixteen year old high school freshman, Katherine Boyd. Stevens’ debut novel introduces the reader to a host of unforgettable characters, situations and issues that captivate the hearts of small town America.

The novel takes place in the Mississippi Delta around the early sixties. Katherine meets the love of her life David, and their love goes on a rollercoaster ride solely because of family issues and political differences. Due to the actions of Katherine’s mother and a string of horrendous events within Katherine’s life, Katherine and David later separate.

Katherine later marries Jeffery, a prestigious attorney, whom she meets in college. Katherine later discovers that Jeffery doesn’t like blacks. She then calls for a divorce but Jeffery feverishly refuses her wishes.
